Affirmative action foes win Prop 209 victory

By Richard Carrelli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court let stand California's groundbreaking Proposition 209, a ban on race and gender preference in hiring and school admission. Affirmative action foes predicted other states now will follow California's lead.

Acting without comment Monday, the nation's highest court rejected a challenge to the California measure by a coalition of civil rights groups.

The measure, an amendment to the state constitution, says the state and local governments cannot "discriminate against or grant preferential treatment to any individual or group on the basis of race, sex, color, ethnicity or national origin."

Lower courts had said the anti-affirmative action measure violated no one's constitutional rights and was a neutral way to promote equality. But its opponents contended the measure relegated racial minorities and women to the status of second-class citizens in California.

The Supreme Court's action was not a decision and set no national precedent. It merely left in place the lower court rulings.

But the action could encourage voters in other states to adopt similar measures.

"I hope and believe other states will follow suit," said Clint Bolick of the Institute for Justice. "The court's (action) is a further repudiation of the arguments made by the Clinton administration and its allies."

He said an anti-affirmative action drive is under way in Washington state. In Houston, a ballot initiative to be voted on Tuesday would do away with affirmative action in the awarding of city contracts.

Another affirmative action foe, Michele Justin of the Pacific Legal Foundation, added: "This ushers in a new era in civil rights. This ... affirms that equal means equal and that discrimination will prevail no longer."

But an angry Mark Rosenbaum of the American Civil Liberties Union of Southern California denounced the court's action.

"For the first time in our nation's history, state and local governments have been stripped of their authority to remedy race and gender discrimination," he said. Enforcement of Proposition

Meet the President: ASI President Cindy Entzi steps out of the shadows

By Brian Johnson
Daily Staff Writer

Who is Cindy Entzi? While students ponder this, ASI President Cindy Entzi is working hard to put the question to rest.

The political science senior said her immediate goal is to address the biggest complaint students have about her.

In the minds of many students, she is the "phantom" ASI President.

"Steve McShane last year, you saw him everywhere and heard everything about him," architecture junior Israel Pena said. "Cindy on the other hand, she's stuck in a cave somewhere. I've heard a lot of people's complaints of 'where is she?' I mean do we even have a president?"

Business marketing senior Michael Planes agrees.

"I think there should be more publicity of what she's doing. I mean, because sometimes I have no clue what's going on," he said.

Entzi said she is aware of these complaints and has made plans to combat them.

"I know as president I need to get out there and make myself known and make ASI known. But I also want the other people involved in ASI, the executive staff, the Board of Directors and the other officers to get out and do the same thing," Entzi said.

Entzi works to keep campaign promise of helping clubs

By Brian Johnson
Daily Staff Writer

When Cindy Entzi was campaigning to be ASI president, she emphasized her commitment to campus clubs. Now in office, she wants to work with Student Life and Activities and the university to make clubs feel welcome and aid them financially.

"We want to make clubs feel like they have someone to go to. Sometimes clubs feel like 'it's just this club,' and if they have a problem with anything, they have nowhere to go," she said.

Entzi said because some clubs don't know how ASI works, or haven't been involved in Student Life and Activities, many club members may feel left out.

In terms of her campaign promise of more money for clubs, she said something has been worked out. ASI will receive, as a result of the Pepsi deal, $5,000 a year for seven years totaling $35,000.

"A committee will be formed," Entzi said, "and clubs will be able to apply for the money. It will be kind of a grant process. Clubs will submit a proposal and the president and the committee will decide who

"We're going to be holding office hours outside like down on Dexter lawn, in the U.U., and by the ag bridge," Entzi said. "It's going to be every two weeks and it will be in different places each time."

To bring the ASI Board of Directors in on the action, Entzi said each time she holds her office hours set up near a college, the directors for that college will be there. She said students will be informed where she will be ahead of time. She hopes to start the program within a few weeks.

Campus Dining talks with national chains

By Christine Spane
Daily Staff Writer

Choosing a meal from a selection of several fast food chains on the Cal Poly campus isn't a scenario that is likely to happen any time soon, but more choices may be on the way.

Nancy Williams, director of Campus Dining, said she is in the process of negotiating with nationally known brands including the Wendy's chain.

"At this point, our limiting factor is the amount of space we have available," Williams said. "Most national brands require at least 600 square feet which we just don't have."

Campus Dining currently has one national branded licensee at The Avenue. Chick-fil-A has approximately two years left on its five-year contract.

Williams said as well as lack of space, the campus faces the problem of territorial rights of individual franchisees in the area.

"There are several brands located close to campus and these individuals pay $150,000 to $250,000 for their franchise.

Along with the right to use the parent company's products and advertising, which promote and support the franchise, they are guaranteed that there won't be another franchise with the same company within a specified distance," she said.

Williams is hopeful that Cal Poly will be able to attract more national brands to give students more choices.

"Many other campuses have gotten into the branded concept and now the companies are starting to look at express service, which takes up less space and also makes it more economical to be in a campus situation," she said.

Revenue from Campus Dining operations goes back to Cal Poly Foundation and is used to financially support the university. Net income from Campus Dining operations in 1996 exceeded $840,000.

One year ago Rory O'Leary, director of Campus Dining at Cal Poly Pomona, licensed a Carl's Jr./Green Burrito dual franchise. He said the arrangement utilized nearly the same space as one licensee, but gave two distinctive choices.

"The student response has been positive and we've increased revenue, probably because we now have a recognizable name on campus," O'Leary said. "The power of branding is phenomenal. Several generations, including mine, have been brought up on branding. For the most part you can go from one state to another and without much deviation you can get the same product. This is the good thing about brand names."

Tom Spengler, chair of ASI Board of Directors, said he thinks students would support the idea of more choices on campus.

"It's my opinion that ASI would support more choices because so many students have quietly complained about the lack of choices," he said. "I was approached by the founder of Juice Club last year about trying to get into the University Union so I know there are businesses that want to be here because it's a great market for them. It's really up to Foundation, and it's my belief that if the students really put a lot of pressure on Foundation, they may be forced to make some changes."

One campus that has expanded student choices is the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa. Last year the university hired Aramark, a food service company which licenses national brand food services under their contracts independent of the university.

Ira Simon, Director of Aramark Campus Services, said the company operates the food services with Aramark employees. They also purchase the food and take the risks of doing business. Aramark's people are trained by the national brand companies and must meet their quality standards. He said the university's food court now includes a Blimpys, Burger King, Chick-fil-A, Manchu Wok, Taco Bell and Starbucks.

"Revenue is up three times the amount before we brought in the licensees," Simon said. "Before, you could aim a shotgun through the food court at 3 p.m. and not hit anybody. Now we're serving 800 people for dinner between 4 and 8 o'clock and it's become more of a student hangout."

Alabama's successful dining court has not been without controversy. In order to pay for the renovation of the building, the licensing fees and the Aramark salaries, the university initiated its Dining Dollars program.

All of the approximately 18,000 students are required to participate in the program. Each student's tuition is increased by $400 per year and that amount is placed in a declining balance program. The student is issued a computerized debit card to use at any campus food service location. If he or she doesn't use the $400 by

According to Entzi, ASI Public Relations Director Kellie Korhonen will be heading up a committee to explore how to get ASI's issues out through campus publications. A communications task force has also been started to look at how to make students more aware of issues and how ASI can, in turn, be more receptive to students. Entzi said the committee will meet this quarter.

Entzi said another one of her major goals is to streamline ASI.

"I really want to work on making ASI the best it could be. A lot of good things have been done in the past, and I want to continue doing those things. I also want to create new ideas and new ways of doing things," Entzi said.

"This year we're looking at a lot of our policies and procedures because they haven't been looked at. Codes are outdated and guidelines are outdated. We're trying to clean out the cupboards to make sure we're running smoothly," Entzi said.

"We're looking at things like extra duplication (of printed materials) and printing costs," she continued. "Do we need to print 100 copies of something? Can we print 50? And instead of going somewhere out of town to print, which might cost more, can we find a local printer?"

"It's things like that which, on their own, may not add up to much, but over all it can really add up to a lot of savings," Entzi said.

Entzi added that ASI will be streamlined by getting an objective third party to look at how things are run.

"We're bringing an outside assessment firm to come in and look at ASI - to come in and look at what we do," she said. "We're also doing technology and staff assessment. We have really dedicated this year to making sure the assessment happens and that we get a report on it by the spring quarter," she said.

— Cindy Entzi
ASI President

Entzi said if something is initiated this year, she wants to get the results within the year as well.

"A lot of times projects will get started in the fall and winter quarters," Entzi said, "and then by the spring quarter there is so much going on that they can sometimes fall by the wayside." Entzi said her challenge is to make sure that doesn't happen.

to give the grants to."

The grants will be for clubs officially recognized by Student Life and Activities and ASI that have not received ASI funding in the past fiscal year. The grants will be awarded on a year-to-year basis.

Some of the determining factors for grant distribution will be the scope of the project, how many students it will benefit and how it will make the club better.

Entzi also wants to inform clubs of other places they can apply for funds.

"A lot of clubs don't realize there are other grant possibilities out there. Student Community Services has $6,000 of their own money that they give out in grants. A lot of clubs don't realize that," Entzi said. "So we want to be able to provide something to clubs saying that this is where you can go to try and get more funding."

"I want to make them aware of other options. So that's something our student club relations director (John Moffatt) will be working on," she said, adding that she hopes the material will come out in January.

Entzi said she will try to get in touch with the students, but she said students should not feel intimidated about going to see her.

"Students can come in and talk to me whenever. I think sometimes students might feel like 'ooh this is the president's office,' and I want people to know that even though I'm ASI president, I'm still a student," Entzi said. "I still have classes, I still have the same issues and problems as other students. If they ever need help with anything I'll understand."

What it's like to be president

By Brian Johnson
Daily Staff Writer

ASI President Cindy Entzi's life these days is a mixture of office work, classes, meetings, office work, meetings, classes and more meetings.

"I get to school around 8 or 9 o'clock, go to the office, then go to class, then go back to the office, then go to a meeting, then back to the office, then another meeting, then back the office," Entzi said.

She stays on campus from 8 a.m. or 9 a.m. until 6 p.m., and on Monday and Wednesday, until 9 p.m.

"It's a 40-hour, or more, a week job," she said. "And on the weekends there are more meetings and conferences I have to attend such as advisory councils and board of directors meetings for alumni."

As ASI president, Entzi fulfills many roles. One role is being the voice of the students.

"I represent the 16,000 students of Cal Poly to the university administration, to other groups on campus and to the community. I bring the students' point of view to others," Entzi said. "Instead of just me, they see the student body."

She also oversees ASI and all its various components. Entzi said while ASI is involved in student government, its duties go way beyond.

"I don't think a lot of students realize that ASI is not just student government. We're also a corporation. And students pay money into this corporation," she said.

The ASI corporation runs several campus programs, including Second Edition, the Craft Center, the Rec Center and the Children's Center.

Entzi brings experience to her position that she gained through her involvement in student government in high school and as a member of the ASI Board of Directors here for the past two years.

Corporate ignorance: Just doing it

By Mark Armstrong

With Chinese President Jiang Zemin yucking it up with everyone from Bill Clinton to Pete Wilson during the past week, I figured it would be good time to look at our enemies. After all, that's what America thrives off of, as I learned from Sunday night's "X-files." We really don't seem to have enough enemies these days - enemies who spit on American flags and goose-step to a dictator's crooked grin.

The truth is we have enemies, but none that we want to stand up to.

This week, Zemin found protesters all around the country making the most of their right to free expression about Tibet, the Tiananmen Square massacre, forced abortions and piles of other human rights violations of which China has been accused. President Clinton and company insisted this summit was essential despite the differences in human rights policies, mainly because of the huge economic opportunities China offers.

So what's a little torture if it will make an American corporation richer?

It's an attitude we've been holding for quite a while. Thanks to labor unions and regulations in the United States, we have seen the best that American corporations have to offer within our own borders. But when we look beyond our borders, we can see where these companies are cutting corners.

It's time for the corporations to start developing some global ethics because it looks as if the real enemy is actually us.

Nike has taken a lot of flack lately for its practices, and deservedly so. Doonesbury attacked the company in a string of episodes. One called for all professional and college athletes to throw down their swooshes and protest Nike's practice of using sweatshop labor in Indonesia. Michael Moore directed a new movie that skewers Nike just like he did to Roger Smith and General Motors in "Roger & Me." Political groups such as Global Exchange and Feminist Majority have also spoken out against Nike's labor practices, saying that the pay in these factories is pitiful, the work conditions are poor and many of the workers are children.

Nike actually found much of the same thing itself back in September when it pretended to give a damn about workers in other countries. The company severed ties with four Indonesian factories, one of them because they refused to meet the minimum required monthly salary of $72.30. The shoe giant also hired former U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young to help public relations for the company, and Young went to Indonesia to inspect some of their factories.

In a letter to the Arizona Republic from Nike, Young was quoted as saying that these factories "were clean, organized, adequately ventilated and well lit. They certainly did not appear to be what most Americans would call 'sweatshops.'"

I don't know about you, but anytime a P.R. director's best description of a factory is "adequately ventilated," there is a problem.

So let's look at the numbers. According to Global Exchange in a recent news article, the average daily wage for a Nike factory worker in Indonesia is $2.

Nike's CEO Phil Knight is worth about $5.2 billion.

Tiger Woods, Andre Agassi, Michael Jordan, Jerry Rice and scores of other athletes have received millions of dollars to endorse the shoes that these children were paid $2 per day to make.

Anything wrong here?

Nike and many other corporations in the United States exploit cheap labor throughout countries such as Indonesia and China and have always avoided protest by claiming that they are actually helping these countries by employing such large numbers in the factories, and really, the workers are just happy to be employed.

With the countries doing very little to encourage going beyond the bare minimum, and corporate bureaucracies looking only at the bottom line, Nike and others won't help these workers live better lives if they don't have to. But in America's working environment, Nike spends all of its money to build a "campus" for its employees, complete with swimming pools and a Club Med atmosphere.

The worst thing we can do is accept the huge gap as a reflection of a free market. The athletic superstars who can't put on a pair of socks unless there's a swoosh have kept their mouths closed and claimed it's not their problem.

It's easy to claim ignorance when you're across the globe playing basketball, signing autographs and living an American life. But when you are getting millions that could go toward acceptable wages for workers who are stitching your signature on a shoe, you'd better feel guilty.

Girls are mean!

By Alan Dunton

To begin, I'd like to throw out this little disclaimer saying that all of the following is by no means all based on fact. I do not pretend to have a profound understanding of the following ideas, and am not sure that I want one. I am merely attempting to organize my thoughts in regards to a particular situation that I have become more aware of over the course of a few weeks, but have known about for some time now. Again, these ideas are nothing new to any of us, I just wish I could have slightly more understanding on the matter than I currently do.

Girls can be awfully mean to each other and us without doing a whole lot.

That's a pretty vague statement, so allow me to explain.

Guys in general are pretty easy going. Sure, we become pissed off every once in a while, but rarely to the extent that our female friends do. Also, we aren't as cut throat towards each other when a problem does arise.

For instance, let's say I'm mad at my friend Bob because he's been saying the football team I like sucks. I know that's a pretty lame argument, but my roommate and I couldn't think of anything two guys would get mad at each other about.

I can do one of two things to correct the situation. First, I can simply ignore him and let the thing blow over and be forgotten. (We all know the Niners are going all the way anyway), or I can say, "Bob, you don't know what the hell you're talking about so why don't you shut up!"

Either way, the problem is solved and neither party involved ends up disgruntled.

Now, coming up with a realistic problem that could arise between two girls is not a problem, selecting a good one from thousands is.

All right, Jane is upset at Susan because some of Jane's friends saw Susan looking in the general direction of a particular guy that Jane is considering talking to. In retaliation, Jane quickly organizes her army of female friends, like the Marines might do before invading a foreign land, and devises a "non-confrontational" action plan to deal with the shrewd Susan. She designates groups to perform reconnaissance, spread negative rumors about Susan and to infiltrate Susan's social network in hopes of isolating her from her own friends. Does this seem like an exaggeration? That's debatable.

It's amazing to me how quickly girls can turn on their own, but with emotions running the show I guess nothing's too far from home.

What does the overuse of emotions stem from, is it like a defense mechanism or something? I was flipping the channels yesterday and I stumbled across a body-building contest on ESPN. The announcer was a woman who happened to be a six-time Ms. Olympia winner. It made me wonder, does she solve her problems with extravagant yet subtle precise mental and verbal attacks, or does she just kick ass?

Greeks most visible to ASI

Editor,

Regarding the Oct. 30 article entitled "Greek System Reviews Alcohol Policy," we would like to make a few additions. The event mentioned in the sidebar was not a Rush activity. It was a party for which measures were taken to avoid under-age drinking.

Unfortunately, these measures failed. These fraternities and sororities are under university investigation for breaking university rules which apply to all ASI clubs and organizations. University rules require a third party alcohol vendor (ie: a bartender or someone with a liquor license) at all ASI club and organizations events where alcohol is served.

Greek clubs constitute the largest sector of ASI clubs, and therefore are the most visible. This visibility leads to more trouble for Greek clubs. It is important for all ASI clubs and organizations to realize that they too are subject to university laws.

FREE SPINAL EXAMINATION

Danger Signals of Pinched Nerves:

1. Neck Pain or Stiffness
2. Low Back or Hip Pain
3. Frequent Headaches
4. Numbness in Hands or Feet
5. Nervousness
6. Arm and Shoulder Pain
7. Dizziness or Loss of Sleep

Why FREE? Thousands of area residents have spine related problems which usually respond to chiropractic care.

This is our way of encouraging you to find out if you have a problem that could be helped by chiropractic care. It is also our way of acquainting you with our staff and facilities.

Examination includes a minimum of standard tests for evaluating the spine. While we are accepting new patients, no one need feel any obligation.

WE ACCEPT INSURANCE

Our modern business office simplifies your insurance paperwork and allows us to treat your condition at little or no cost to you.

Crews control 375-acre brush fire in state park

Associated Press

MORRO BAY — The last of several brush fires that burned across Southern California during the weekend were brought under control Monday, authorities said. No one was hurt and no structures were damaged.

A 375-acre fire at Montana De Oro State Park, 10 miles south of Morro Bay, was controlled at 8 a.m., California Department of Forestry Capt. John Taylor said.

Cause of the fire, which was reported at 9:20 p.m. Saturday, was under investigation.

Elsewhere, firefighters mopped up the remains of blazes at Vandenberg Air Force Base, in the San Diego County town of Fallbrook and on the Los Angeles-Ventura county line.

A fire that burned 136 acres of brush near homes in Agoura

Hills and Oak Park on Saturday was man-caused, but it was unclear whether it was deliberately set, said Ventura County fire dispatcher Charles Carranza. The fire was contained Saturday evening.

A 60-acre blaze at Fallbrook was controlled at 8:30 a.m. Monday, CDF dispatcher Dollie Pierce said. The cause of the blaze was believed to be a campfire.

At Vandenberg Air Force Base, crews continued cleanup of a 1,225-acre fire accidentally set Friday by an explosives disposal team destroying unusable flares. A spark from a flare escaped the safety area and landed in some dry brush.

No buildings were damaged by the fire. It was brought under control Sunday, base officials said.

Study says smoking bans in bars do not hurt business

By Loran Neergaard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sales tax revenues from seven California cities and counties suggest that banning smoking in bars is not bad for business, says a study in the American Journal of Public Health.

The tobacco industry strongly opposes smoking bans in restaurants and bars, saying they keep customers away.

Previous studies had concluded bans did not hurt restaurant business. The new study, in Tuesday's issue of the American Public Health Association's journal, argues bars aren't hurt, either.

"The claim that bars will go broke just is not supported by the facts," said Stanton Glantz of the University of California, San Francisco.

The tobacco industry-funded National Smokers Alliance denounced the study as containing "a myriad of factual errors and misrepresentations."

Glantz analyzed sales tax records from 1991 through 1995 for five California cities — Anderson, Davis, Redding, San Luis Obispo and Tiburon — two counties, Santa Clara and Shasta.

Smoking bans did not hurt business in any area, Glantz concluded.

One analysis, for example, determined the fraction of retail sales that bars account for in each area. Only one city, Anderson, posted any decline after the smoking ban — the sales proportion dropped seven-tenths of a percent. But that was well within the city's normal business fluctuations before the ban, Glantz said.

California is poised to ban smoking in every bar on Jan. 1.

The smokers alliance is suing Glantz, a well-known anti-tobacco researcher, and the university over his previous findings that smoking bans don't hurt restaurants. The NSA argued that the earlier study contained serious errors and repeated that contention in its reaction to the new Glantz study.

The alliance said that one of the communities used by Glantz — Tiburon — has "too few bars from which to draw meaningful economic conclusions." The alliance also attacked a defense of Glantz by the American Public Health Association.

the end of the academic year, a refund can be requested.

"Without the guaranteed sales of $400 per student, we wouldn't have the revenue to remodel, hire service consultants or hire food service design teams," Simon said.

Simon also said there were some complaints last spring when the program was initiated, but renovations to the food court were still not complete, so students felt they were spending $400 but still didn't have the choices they were promised. There have also been complaints from those who objected to paying because they didn't intend to use the food service on campus and didn't want the university to have the use of their money for the full year before they could apply for a refund.

Simon said the percentage of those dissatisfied is small and the biggest controversy has been with off-campus restaurants.

"Most of these are 'mom and pop' operations located near the university," he said. "They feel we're competing unfairly because we require students to pay for food service whether they intend to use it or not. Some of these places have closed down, but within the same radius, others have opened."

Cal Poly Foundation Associate Director Robert Griffin said that to get more fast food operations on campus, Foundation would need to look at the viability of the operation and authorize the franchisee or licensee agreement.

"If there's a strong preference for that kind of fast food, and if there was a franchise deal that allows Foundation to make a reasonable return on the arrangement, then I think it's got possibilities. But what typically happens is the franchise or license amount that has to be paid can sometimes make the deal not worth doing," he said.

"In the university of Alabama situation, the students are underwriting or subsidizing capital improvements. That wouldn't work at Cal Poly because of the structure of the CSU funding approach," Griffin said.

Griffin said some Alabama students were upset because the university would use that mechanism to capitalize a project.

"Many felt they wouldn't get the benefit while they were at the university. It's a creative approach but I'm not sure that it's any more equitable than the way we do it, by taking our net income and putting it into a reserve and then funding renovation projects and our new capital facilities out of that reserve," he said.

"In the campuses that I've visited, the overall consensus is that choice is paramount in the food customer's mind. We recognize the burden that we have to keep those customers happy," Griffin said.

Negotiations for possible franchise restaurants at Cal Poly are ongoing, but not expected to be settled anytime soon.

209 leaves California "for the time being, at least, as the only state unwilling to stand up and take strong measures against gender and race discrimination within its borders," Rosenbaum said.

Martha Davis of the NOW Legal Defense and Educational Fund predicted future litigation if other states adopt similar rollbacks of affirmative action. "The last thing we want is to hold up California as a model. I think it would be disastrous if Proposition 209 were exported to other states," she said.

Davis also said the possibility exists that the California measure will be challenged again as individual programs are dismantled.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the measure, adopted by a public initiative in 1996, last April.

Civil rights advocates then sought the highest court's help, contending that Proposition 209 would block even those government efforts to enforce racial or gender preferences that are "permitted or required" by the federal Constitution.

How much flexibility state and local governments have in such matters, their appeal said, "is one of fundamental and nationwide social and political significance."

"Proposition 209 leaves public universities free to grant admissions preferences" to "children of alumni, donors or friends of university officials," the appeal said. "Municipalities are free to grant hiring preferences to veterans or those with close political ties to local officials."

Shaq issues apologies

By John Antczok
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Shaquille O'Neal offered an apology Monday to Utah center Greg Ostertag for decking him last week between practice sessions.

O'Neal included his own Los Angeles Lakers in the written apology and also admitted he had failed to set a good example for young people.

"I hope he accepts my apology and that he and I can put behind us any bad feelings," O'Neal said of Ostertag.

"I made a mistake. Instead of focusing upon what is best for the team, I got caught up in the drama of the season's first game and reacted emotionally instead of logically."

An open-hand slap by O'Neal sent Ostertag to the floor near the basketball court at the Forum in Inglewood on Friday.

The incident occurred as the Jazz were leaving the court after a pre-game shootaround and the Lakers were preparing to take the court.

Ostertag was not hurt, and went on to play that night, scoring only two points in the Jazz's 104-87 loss to the Lakers. O'Neal didn't play in the season opener because he was still recuperating from an abdominal muscle injury.

O'Neal also apologized to his own team, specifically to owner Jerry Buss and executive vice president Jerry West, and to fans.

He added that young people shouldn't imitate what he did.

"I acknowledge my responsibility to set a good example for young people and I admit that in this instance, I did not do so," O'Neal wrote. "I ask those young people not to emulate my conduct here because there is no excuse to engage in physical confrontation."

"I always tell kids to follow their dreams but I should add that it is important to learn from your mistakes and prepare yourself so that they will not happen again."

Fifteen U.S. World Cup Champions selected for Olympic hockey team

Associated Press

COLORADO — Four former Olympians — defenseman Chris Chelios of Chicago, forward Keith Tkachuk of Phoenix and goalie Mike Richter and defenseman Brian Leetch, both of the New York Rangers — were among 17 players chosen Monday for the U.S. hockey team at the Nagano Olympics.

Other prominent names on the roster for the February showcase are forwards Brett Hull of St. Louis, Tony Amonte of Chicago and Jeremy Roenick of Phoenix.

Chelios played in the 1984 Winter Games, Leetch and Richter were on the 1988 team and Tkachuk played in 1992.

Fifteen of the players chosen were on the U.S. team that won the World Cup tournament in 1996. Ron Wilson, coach of the Washington Capitals, who coached that squad, will coach the Olympic team. John Cuniff and Paul Holmgren, both former NHL coaches, and Jeff Jackson, former coach at Lake Superior State University, will be assistant coaches.

Richter was MVP of the World Cup with a 5-1 record and 2.43 goals-against average. Hull was the leading scorer in the World Cup with seven goals and four assists in seven games. Amonte scored the winning goal against Canada in the championship game.

This marks the first time the NHL is interrupting its season to compete in the Olympics. Fourteen countries will participate, with six teams — Canada, Czech Republic, Finland, Russia, Sweden and the United States — automatically advancing to the championship round.

Lou Lamoriello, president and general manager of the New Jersey Devils and GM of the 1998 Olympic hockey team, said six more players, a goalie and five skaters, will be selected by Dec. 1 to complete the roster.

Lamoriello said keeping the core of the World Cup team intact was vital.

"Every team you try to compose, three elements come into play — size, strength and skill," he said. "And sometimes, more significant is chemistry. We need everyone in the same direction."

They are joined by forwards John

LeClair and Joel Otto of the Philadelphia Flyers, Adam Deadmarsh of the Colorado Avalanche, Mike Modano of the Dallas Stars and Doug Weight of the Edmonton Oilers.

Besides Leetch and Chelios, defensemen picked were Derian Hatcher of Dallas, Kevin Hatcher of the Pittsburgh Penguins, Mathieu Schneider of the Toronto Maple Leafs and Gary Suter of Chicago. John Vanbiesbrouck of the Florida Panthers joins Richter in goal.

"If we don't win the gold medal, we'll be extremely disappointed," Wilson said. "We did that at the World Cup. From Day One, we said we were playing for first place. It's not negative pressure. It's pressure great players cherish."
